July 14: Join Riane Eisler for the free Caring Economy webinar

Change is possible- let's make the economic value of the work of care visible in this election year

We all know that parenting affects the quality of our kids lives. At the Caring Economy Campaign, we are showing how it also matters for a healthy economy.

Science has established that most human brain development occurs between birth and age 5. Yet the US invests less than half as much as a percentage of GDP in young children than other advanced economies like those in the UK, France, Norway, Sweden, and Denmark. Change is possible if we apply a fresh approach to the seemingly intractable problems of economic inequality, social injustice, and gender and racial disparity.

Making the economic value of the work of care visible is this fresh approach.

The Caring Economy Starter Course, offered free to an extended network of economists, activists, and leaders around the nation, connects the dots between care and prosperity and shows how we can make the case for care. Join Riane Eisler next week on July 14 and learn how you can be part of a vital caring movement.
